

Contents

Preface – Martin Šolc	9
Introduction – Tomáš W. Pavlíček	13
Chapter I Teachers: the interwar scholarly tradition (Astronomical associations – Universities – Observatories)
– Petra Hyklová	33
Chapter II Students: the first postwar generation (The long-awaited liberation – Back to the lecture halls – Research into the history of astronomy from below)
– Tomáš W. Pavlíček	57
Chapter III For society: people’s observatories – temples of atheism or education? (Learning from classmates – Astronomer and socialist – Socialist university or competitive field?)
– Tomáš W. Pavlíček	89
Chapter IV Institutes: new observation techniques (The CSAS Astronomical Institute – New instruments, new horizons – Cadre education, male and female postgraduates)
– Tomáš W. Pavlíček	123
Chapter V New instruments (Luboš Perek Telescope – Czechoslovak astronomy in Slovakia)
– Tomáš W. Pavlíček, and Martin Šolc	155
Chapter VI International contacts: visible and invisible networks (The 13th IAU General Assembly in Prague – 1968, a milestone in collaboration? – Hvar, Interkosmos, and global epistemic communities)
– Tomáš W. Pavlíček	179
Conclusion	211
Figures	223
Bibliography (with a list of interviews)	247
Summary	259
List of abbreviations	260
List of tables	262
Subject index	273
Name index	279